Kiwanians Hear Fire Prevention Talk Wednesday

Achievements of Sea Scouts Told Club by Member

The regular weekly meeting of the Redwood City Kiwanis club Wednesday featured Fire Prevention Week, and the speaker for the day was Mark Ryan, fire chief of Redwood City. The fire department also had it apparatus drawn up in front of the hotel that it might be examined by the members of the club. Chief Ryan was introduced by Postmaster Carl Mabie, who has for years been a member of the department. Special guests of the club were Assistant Chief, Clarence Choate, and Edward Holmquist. Chief Ryan spoke on fire prevention and on the work of the Redwood City fire department. His talk was a most interesting one and was listened to most intently by the members of the service club.

The club has sponsored the local unit of the Sea Scouts, and the achievement of this tropp in winning a sailing race in San Francisco last week was told to the members of the club by Edward Williams, a member of the Sea Scout troop.

Bandit Jailed in Burglary of San Bruno Store

Son of S. F. Attorney Found To be Burglar of Cigar Store

A long list of peninsula burglaries have been confessed by Joseph P. Donnelly Jr., former chain store manager, and son of a prominent San Francisco attorney. Donnelly was captured in San Bruno, and made two breaks for freedom before he was placed in the jail here by the San Bruno officers. He was arrested after he had broken into and robbed a San Bruno cigar store.

Twice after his arrest the burglar attempted to escape. One time, wearing the hand cuffs of the arresting officer he escaped and ran into a service station where he told a story of having been attacked by bandits and claimed that they had handcuffed him and were even then persuing him. With this story he persuaded the service station operator to file the hand cuffs off his wrists.

Donnelly also revealed in a story to Assistant District Attorney Harold Anderson, that he had robbed the Skaggs store in Palo Alto of $8 Sunday night after having forced a rear door of the store. It was while on his way to Palo Alto that he stopped at the San Bruno cigar store and decided that it would be a likely place for his next robbery.

Donnelly, who is now 23, has a crime record dating back to the time when he was 15 years old. He was arrested in San Francisco four years ago, and confessed to about thirty burglaries at that time. He was later released on probation in care of his father.

The youth blames his crimes on drink. "I only do this when I'm drunk," he told officers.

Efforts are being made to determine if Donnelly is responsible for many burglaries on the peninsula. It is thought that perhaps his arrest may clear up a number of mysterious robberies.

S.M. Man Killed In Train Crash At Burlingame

Restaurant Man Drives Onto Track In Front Of Speeding Train

Albert E. Seibert, Burlingame restaurant man, was killed instantly Tuesday afternoon when he drove his car onto the Southern Pacific tracks in front of a northbound train at Bayswater avenue in Burlingame.

Several cars are said to have been waiting at the crossing when Siebert approached and without hesitating, drove onto the track immediately into the path of the train. The machine was thrown a distance of about 500 feet by the impact and fell into a heap of wreckage onto the track. County Coroner J. C. McGovern, who was waiting a short distance away, was a witness to the accident. The engineer of the train was William Hanson, San Francisco.

- - The Bridge That The Oyster Built - -

Pacific Portland Cement Plant at Redwood City which produced the cement for the longest vehicle bridge in the world. Suction dredges are used to bring the lime bearing oyster shells from the bottom of the bay and by a unique process used nowhere else in the United States, the shells are made into cement. The factory represents an investment of four million dollars.

By ROSCOE D. WYATT

From a hilltop in what is now San Mateo county, members of the Portola Expedition first glimpsed the San Francisco Bay on November 1, 1769. Credit for this must be given to Sargeant Ortega and a small reconnoitering party which left camp at Pedro Cove under orders to find a way to Point Reyes which had been sighted the day before from the top of the Montara Mountain.

What would Sergeant Ortega have thought or said, if at the time he caught sight of this estero, "an immense arm of the sea," he could have seen, as you can today, the longest highway bridge in the world stretching away mile upon mile toward the foothills along the East-bay shore of San Francisco Bay? He certainly would have had another item to write down in his own private "Believe it or Not." He would have labelled it "Puento Largo," the long bridge, for even today it is the longest vehicular bridge — seven and one tenth miles over water and twelve miles in length including necessary approaches.

Even its great length is not its most remarkable characteristic, for believe it or not, it is The Bridge he Oyster Built. Every ounce of portland cement that went into this beautiful as well as enormous structure was made from oyster shells dregded from the bottom of the bay at the bridge site and converted for its present use by the nearby Pacific Portland Cement Company at Redwood City.

Engineers announced that it took only fouteen months to build the bridge, but thousands of years ago Billy Oyster and billions of his bivalve brothers began their work of extracting the necessary lime and other materials from the waters of San Francisco Bay for the bridge across its southern arm. For thousands of years the snows of the high mountains, the rains in the lesser hills, and the rivers and streams in the valleys were carrying their silt and depositing it in layers over a vast area of thirty thousand acres of tide lands adjacent to the deep water channel of the Bay.

Since Bily Oyster could not travel afar, these powers of nature supplemented his efforts and this cooperation provided in this spot all the raw materials essential to portland cement—lime 65 per cent, silica 22 per cent, iron oxide 3 per cent and aluminum oxide 8 per cent.

Some one has said that Billy Oyster "was an ambitious little chap. He wasn't satisfied with being a delight to the palate of the epicure, nor with giving the shimmering pearl for milady's necklace the using of his inner shell for trinklets and his outer shell for feeding poultry wasn't his idea of creating a monument to posterity." Well, here's nine rahs for Billy Oyster!

He built a bigger and better monument in the "longest bridge," and for its beauty and usefulness, you and thousands of others crossing this Bay Bridge daily, can vouch.

But Andy says "Rome wasn't burned in a day." Billy Oyster and his brothers started their work even thousands of years before that bright November morn in 1769 when Sergeant Ortega looked down from the crest of the peninsula ridge. And talk about the patience of Job —Billy Oyster had to wait ages for man to realize that his shell was practically pure lime, and then to discover what Billy had been doing in this partticular place. And think what Billy and his brothers then had to go through. After thousands of long years of neglect they and their bed of clay and silt are taken from the floor of the Bay by a great dredge, sometimes with a suction tube with a cutter at the end like an airplane propeller, loaded on barges, towed to the unloading dock and there discharged into huge storage pits by a giant traveling crane, in piles that would cover a seven room house. Finally these shells are conveyed to the grinding mills which are giant cylinders of steel, partially filled with steel balls, like old-fashioned cannon-balls, which tumble around as the cylinders turn, so as to ulverize the shells.

Then, too, think of the intense heat to which they must be submitted, greater than required to melt steel and envy Billy Oyster and his brothers. But there is yet a more rigid test to which he and his brothers must be ut. That pulverizing must go on until he can meet the United States Government requirements that 78 per cent of him in powder form will pass through a screen finer than the finest silk. The finest silk has a mere thirty thousand holes to the square inch but the screen which Billy and his brthers must pass has forty thousand to the square inch and will hold water for two or more days. Life—and even death, with Billy is just one thing after another.

And in the cement plant, easily seen as you roll along in your car over "The Bridge the Oyster Built," one thousand tons of him are daily made into this fine substance. And as if wonders never cease, the sacks in which Billy and hiss brother reach the market are tied before they are filled—Billy enters through a hole in the bottom.

When next you cross "The Bridge the Oyster Built," just give a thought to Billy Oyster and the billiosn of his bivalve brothers, who worked for ages and ages that you might cross San Francisco Bay, quickly and comfortably—and not on a tule raft as did the Indians of Ortega's day.

SUPERVISORS START NEW ROAD FUND FOR SPECIAL ROAD WORK

Opinion Rendered by Attorney General in Regard to State Apportionment Results in New System

Road Fund System Reorganized

A resolution presented by District Attorney Edmund Scott establishing a special road fund into which all gas tax and other moneys received by the county from the state will be deposited, was adopted by the board of supervisors at its adjourned session Wednesday morning. The new fund is in compliance with the opinion of the Attorney General's office, which recently ruled that the division of the state money equally among the five road districts, as has been the custom of the supervisors for the past thirteen years, is illegal.

At the meeting Wednesday morning Supervisor Hickey sought by motion to have the county engineer direct all road work in the county and administer the money appropriated from the special fund created by the supervisors. This plan would have taken the money out of the hands of the five supervisors. Supervisor Thompson seconded the motion of Supervisor Hickey, which was lost by a vote of three to two. Chairman Francis and Supervisors Brown and Poole voting against the plan. As it now stands the board by a majority vote can determine where the money from this special fund can be spent. The $15,000 gas tax money recently transferred by the board to Chairman Francis' district on the coastside, which the attorney general ruled illegal, will not go back to Dr. Thompson's but will be deposited in the new special fund.

In making his defeated motion Supervisor Hickey said he honestly felt that it was to the best interests of the county to have the state money placed in one fund and let the county engineer, aided by the county planning commission, decide where best it shall be spent.

Supervisor Poole said he felt that it was perfectly proper to place all the gas money in one fund but that he didn't see why it should be left to the engineer to decide where it should be spent. "No one knows better than the people of their own district where and how the money should be spent for their roads," declared Supervisor Poole.

Taking exceptions to articles appearing in a San Francisco newspaper last week, Chairman Manuel Francis denied at Wednesday's meeting that he had purchased 1642 gallons of gasoline for his district at thirteen cents a gallon, while other supervisors were able to buy gasoline under contract with the couny at 10 cents a gallon. There is a claim on file of the Standard Oil Company and the Shell Oil Company for 1642 gallons of gasoline supplied over a two months' period, Chairman Francis explained, but the claim had been rejected by the board. He said he had not authorized the purchase.

Supervisors Brown and Poole verified the statements of Chairman Francis that the claim of the Standard Oil Company and the Shell Oil Company had not been allowed.

County Purchasing Agent E. H. Werder explained that the situation was due to a misunderstanding more than any thing else. The Standard and Shell companies had not agreed to deliver gas to the Fourth district at the ten cent rate, said the purchasing agent, who also stated that he had held up the claim for the 1642 gallons of gasoline in his office.

Legion Will Aid Fire Protection

Members of the Redwood City post of the American Legion will aid a nation-wide movement on the part of the American Legion to reduce fire losses.

In connection with the observance of Fire Prevention Week, the post held a fire prevention meeting at which Fire Chief Mark Ryan was the speaker. The post also appointed an emergency committee to cooperate with the fire department and other city forces in the event of any emergency of relief distress. The emergency committee appointed consists of Past Commander Thomas Vernall, chairman, Emmett Donnelly, Floyd Grainger, Lee Devins, and Past Commander C. C. Filsinger.

Among other things accomplished at the National American Legion Convention in Detroit, the legionnaires resolved to adopt a campaign of fire prevention and protection as a major activity.

The initiative in proposing this move on the part of the Legion was made by the California department. The matter was first taken up at the state convention held at Long Beach.

By this move the largest civic organization in the country with numerous posts in every community, will actively work for the decrease of fire hazards and for the betterment of fire protection conditions, and that there will be millions of men throughout the country with an appreciative understanding of the importance of legislative measures introduced to provide the ways and means of more adequate fire protection.

The Popular Market will be a home-owned and home-operated market.

The proprietors of the new market are E. C. Potts and W. S. Smith. The store will also contain a delecatessen department managed by Joe Territo and a produce department managed by Mr. Harvis. Service Today For A. L. Fulton Ex-Postmaster

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the parlors of Layng & Tinney for Albert E. Fulton, lumberman and former postmaster of this city, who died Wednesday morning in Santa Clara county after a brief ilness.

Fulton was a native of Indiana, and in his early life was a civil engineer. He was employed by the Denver and Reo Grande railway, and worked on the construction of that rail line to its western terminus. He then came to California and was engaged as bridge engineer by the Southern Pacific company. Some forty years ago he left the railroad and engaged in the lumber business near La Honda in partnership with the late George C. Ross under the name of Fulton & Ross and the firm also conducted a lumber yard in Redwood City.

After the dissolution of this business, Fulton engaged in a number of enterprises and in 1922 was made postmaster of this city, succeeding J. V. Swift. The apointment was only temporary, however, and in the latter part of the same year he was succeeded by W. J. Dusel. He left here some five years ago and has been residing in Santa Clara county.

Funeral services will be conducted by Redwood City Lodge of Masons, of which the deceased had been a member for many years. Interment will be in Union cemetery.

Forecasting Political Weather

Of course it is a little early to predict 1932 results. But the political forecasters have been busy all summer, trying to appraise the possibilities. Party leaders themselves have spent the past three months trying to find out where they stand, and they are surprisingly far from agreeing on any of the fundamentals of the situation.

The other day two men active in national affairs each wrote down, independently of each other, the list of states that the Republican party might carry in the next national election. They agreed in listing the same eight states as the only ones in which Republican prospects were entirely satisfactory.

Collier's Washington correspondent suggests that "the greatest political overturn that has ever taken place has occured since the last national election."

However, if straws are what shows the direction of the wind, it must be admitted that all the present straws are economic rather than political. Depression, unemployment and financial difficulty hold the stage. When a man is asked how the political situation looks in his district, he is quite likely to reply in terms like those of the following letter, quoted recently by a Washington correspondent as a report on political conditions in a certain important state:

"We are in a most distresing condition in this section. While we harvested an unusual crop of wheat and oats and have the best corn prospects in many years, our banks continue to tumble over, credit facilities are practically nil, farms are being forclosed, mercantile establishments are failing, and a cloud of gloom envelops the country. Many of our most substantinal farmers have gone broke.'"

All of which goes to prove merely that at this moment the nation is preoccupied with its economic difficulties, and can hardly be expected to talk politics except in terms of its preoccupations. The winter and spring may bring important changes in the business situation, if so, many voters will come out of their present fog.

Holding to Tradition

Life is made up of tradition. Deprived of tradition the world would be a barren place indeed, and the most fascinating work would become drudgery. No activity has been more bound up in tradition than that of the men who "go down to the sea in ships," and it is the tradition of generations of sea faring men which makes a ship a place of adventure and surrounds any waterfront with a romance and mystery of its own.

Nautical nomenclaure is a part of the tradition of the sea and as much a part of a good sailor's equipment as his marlin' spike or holy stone. For this reason the tendency of certain maritime congresses to reform ship nomenclature appears to us to be landlubberly and unnecessary. Those gentlemen who would trade starboard and port for right and left, would also have the sailors sweeping off the front porch; going down stairs to the basement, or mopping up the floor of the upper story.

The Editorial Circuit Rider

(A symposium of editorial comment from California Newspapers.)
By MELVIN LORD

Looking through the mists of the nation's political future California can see no one but Herbert Hoover as the Republican presidential nominee for 1932—and Calvin Coolidge as a possibility in 1936.

This viewpoint is taken directly as the result of Coolidge's recent announcement that he would not be in the race next year. Many publications, however, have taken the stand that this does not indicate he has withdrawn entirely from the political playground.

The Hollister Free Lance brings up this point with the question:

"Does Coolidge figure that the next four years are going to be tough for a president, anyway, and that he would rather be "drafted" as a nominee in 1936, when the upturn is well under way? Or is Borah or one of the other liberals in the G. O. P. ranks going to give Herbert Clark Hoover a run for the nomination?"

The Pasadena Star-News points more definitely toward the former president as a standard bearer for the Republicans in 1936.

"For president in 1936—Calvin Coolidge! Republicane all over the country no doubt have this in mind and heart. Mr. Coolidge will be eligible in every sense of the word, in that year. He will be none too old. His party then will be free to nominate him again. The country probably will be eager to send him back to the White House for another four years," The Star-News contends.

Under the heading "He won't run—yet," The Colusa Herald comments on the Coolidge declaration, concluding with the statement that "we believe it will be impossible to defeat Hoover for the second term and think that he should have another chance.

The Stockton Record believes that "by coming out flatfootedly at this time" Coolidge has done his part a good service by clearing the atmosphere and paving the way for Hoover's re-nomination. This opinion is joined in by The Napa Daily Register which adds that the party "cannot afford to split on leadership" at this time.

Coolidge's action is termed by The Visalia Times-Delta as that of "a patriotic statesman and a sane party man," which permits the Republicans to "devote their entire energies to perfecting lines of defense.

The withdrawl of the former president "must have been a shock to some Republican leaders who long ago were convinced that the party cannot hope for another victory with Hoover as its candidate" in the opinion of he Bakersfield Californian.

Why Not Start a New Business?

No matter how bright the prospects, a new business has to go through a certain amount of grief before it turns the corner and produces profits.

Contacts have to be made, product or service has to be perfected, confidence has to be established.

Profits in any business come from the natural flow of orders to the concern. It always costs more to gets orders from new customers than to fill the orders which come without specific effort because the customer has bought before and naturally returns for goods which satisfy him.

A business established when new orders are hard to get will be based on sound economies which will produce steady profits as general buying increases.

If you can figure out a way to make ends meet at this time, you will ride on the tide of prosperity during flush times and will be prepared to meet future recessions when they come.

Get out a pencil. Can the idea you have carry the load now? If is can, don't wait Now is the time to start.

If you have enough capital to carry the burden of starting for six months and you feel you can handle the three essentials of business—production, sales, finance—go it alone. If your capital is not sufficient, get a partner, but be sure he brings something to the business besides money. If you are a producer, get a salesman or sound financial man. If you have sales ability, the chances are you need help in the other directions. Hunt for these qualities. Take them in with you on a fair division, and get going.

Remember there are not many Henry Fords who can make, sell and finance. And even he has had a lot of help.

Everytime it begins to look as if something may be accomplished for peace and prosperity by international agreement, a lot of patriotic hundred-percenters interfere again and spoil the plan.

Chapter 55—

A Surprise For The Count

The Count de Bellefonte returned to the Villa Mora in a bad temper. And he took no pains to conceal the fact. For several days he had had a feeling something unpleasant was going to happen, and he decided now that the arrival of Dr. Mac's letter was that something.

During the drive to the telegraph office, he had tried to get Sheila to give him the message that she had written in answer to the letter.

But she sensed his determination to prevent her sending it, and delivered it herself into the hands of the clerk, smiling impishly at Bellefonte.

By the time the car rolled under the porte cochere, Harry, although he was usually indifferent to the Count's moods, had begun to see that something was amiss. He whispered a question to Sheila, but she silenced him with a shake of her head.

The Count stepped out of the motor and turned to help Sheila to alight, ignoring Harry. The servant who answered the bell whispered to Bellefonte and he stalked away, with a muttered word of apology, to the garden, where the Baronne was waiting for him. He was not slow to notice that she seemed to be in very good humor. "She has some bad news for me," he grumbled to himself.

Se laid aside her magazine and made room for him beside her. "Did you have a pleasant drive?" she asked demurely.

He shrugged and ruffled the leaves of a book that lay on the bench. "Why did you send for me?"

"To tell you, my glum friend, that Doctor Baxter who wrote the letter that you found so disturbing this morning is now in the library, waiting to see Constance. He arrived shortly after you left."

Bellefonte repressed an exclamation. "You say that as if you thought his arrival meant a great deal to me." Inwardly he was saying, "And, somehow, I have a suspicion that it does."

Then, impatient of his own fears, he asked: "Have you told Constance?"

"No," said the Barone. "I wanted to tell you first." She peered at him an dsmiled knowingly. "He's a handsome chap, she volunteered. "And very personable."

"Since you are so impressed with him, I suppose you'll ask him to lunch," he muttered, wondering, meanwhile, just why he was so disturbed by this man's arrival He told himself that it was as jealousy—that he resented the presence of a man who was Constance's friend, but whom he did not know.

The Baronne was eyeing him curiously. "I think I'll follow your suggestion and ask him to stay," she said. "Things have been very dull, Constance needs brightening up You will stay, of course, and I'll ask Mr. Edmonds."

Bellefonte stood up abruptly. It would never do to let her see how upset he was. "I'll stay, with pleasure," he said.

Sheila, meanwhile was in her dressing-rom, preparing for lunch. Her mind was filled with thoughts of Doc. Mac.

What had brought him to Paris? know of the masquerade that she abouts? And how much did he know of the masquerade that s he had carried on?

Her telegram had told him that she felt secure. What an unspeakable relief to know that a friend was near. For Dr. Mac was her best friend, and seeing him would make her happier than anything in the world.

yet, Constance," Harry said. "She softly through the house, and Sheila went down-stairs to find Harry and the Count waiting in the hall.

"The Baronne hasn't come down yet, Constance," Harry said. "She& has a caller in the library. Shall we stroll on the terrace?"

As they took a turn on the stone terrace that overlooked the gardens, Sheila glanced a Harry with new interest. He wasn't nearly as handsome as Dr. Mac, she decided. And he wasn't as strong and dependable, or as masterful.

Her musings were interrupted when the Count appeared at the French windows and signaled them to come in. The Baronne was standing at the doorway of the library. The door was ajar. She hesitated a moment and then closed it, when Sheila and Harry appeared, and led the way to the dining room.

Bellefonte who seemed about to speak, shrugged and walked after her with Sheila. The luncheon table was set for six, but one place was vacant.

"Another guest?" the Count hinted. The Baronne smiled at him, but she did not answer his question.

"Who is the sixth member of the party?" asked Sheila idly. The place was next to her:

"The Count will tell you," said the Baronne sweetly. "I can't deprive him of the pleasure. He's been looking forward to it ever since you returned from your drive."

"Who is it, Jean?" asked Sheila, her heart pounding. Then her eyes lightened. She did not notice the Count's sullen expression, or Harry's quick look of distress.

The Baronne ended the tense moment by saying to the butler: "Please ask the gentleman in the library to join us."

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 15 (UP)—Tallulah Bankhead, darkeyed daughter of a southern senator, evidently is set for a big year in Hollywood.

Paramount is out with the announcement that Miss Bankhead has been signed to another contract. It was added that the studio is neggotiating for "Brothers Karamazov," Dostoievsky's famous work which was so well done in the German version.

It was taken for granted in Hollywood (even at Paramount) that Miss Bankhead's first two pictures lacked something. Paramount executives, however, are convinced that that something was not Tallulah. So another contract and "Brothers Karamazov" were decided upon to boost the Bankhead stock.

Hollywood critics regard "Brothers Karamazov" as strictly Greta Garbo material—or perhaps Marlene Dietrich. There was many a gasp when the news leaked out that Miss Bankhead probably would get the prize.

Clarence Darrow, according to Hollywood reports, has let it be known that he is perfectly willing that a series of shorts he has written about the "Causes of Crime" be filmed. Darrow, it is said, is even willing to appear in the films in person. The only catch is that the noted criminal attorney wants the filming to take place in Chicago. Of all the Hollywood studios, it is declared, Columbia is the only one with a Chicago plant equipped to do the work.

Another historic relic has been brought forth at Pescadero in the shape of the first United States flag ever hoised there. Some twenty odd years ago the citizens erected a flag staff and decide to have a flag, which in those days was not such an easy matter. In order to get the blue field it was necessary to buy a blue flannel shirt, and all the work had to be done by hand. So when it was finished the ladies felt not a little proud of the fine appearance of their flag. Mr. O'-Brein, the blacksmith, was the custodian of the flag during his life time, and at his death gave it in charge to Mrs. B. D. Weeks, in whose possession it was until a few years ago when it disappeared to again appear at the Garfield memorial services. That old flag won't be lost again as long as Mrs. Weeks lives.

Indians to Meet San Jose To-day

Meeting the San Jose high school football team today at 3:30 p. m., the Sequoia high varsity will encounter its second rival in its quest for the Peninsula Athletic League title.

The Garden City's 6 to 0 win over Sequoia last year has aroused a desire for revenge in Cherokee circles. For the past two seasons Sequoia and San Jose have been competing in the effort to keep out of the cellar position in the league finals. This season, however, finds both teams out for league championships.

In their last tussles both fared well, San Jose defeating the San Jose State Teachers college by a 13 to 12 score and Sequoia opening her league season by upsetting the Burlingame team 6 to 0. Sequoia is favored to have the edge over the Garden City eleven, suffering only one defeat this season, while the latter has been beaten several times.

San Jose will enter the lists with a heavy team today, featuring a line averaging close to 200 pounds. A set of speedy backs will also be in action against Sequoia, the combination being a difficult one to subdue. The Indian unit, however, will be a rigid bit of human machinery to stop. With a veteran line of two terms' experience functioning well, and a set of backs who have proved themselves worthy of their position in past performances, Sequoia hopes to stage a good showing today.

Coach Len Casanova has been drilling his Cherokees in passing offence for the better part of this week in an effort to improve the aerial attack and defense.

One of the latest additions to Casanova's squad is Bill Lewis, Indian half, who has been doing some accurate passing this week during practice. Lewis has been unable to play for the better art of the season on account of arm injuries, but now is in the best of condition to lay against the San Jose team.

Though Richard Martin, Sequoia guard, will be unfit to enter the tilt this Friday, Max Green, who has been out on account of leg injuries, will be ready to fill the line position. Green was originally first string guard and will probably perform as well as Martin.

A rally was held in the boys' gym yesterday to arouse enthusiasm. San Jose being one of the main barriers between Sequoia and her first P. A. L. campionship since 1913, the students expect to come out in force today to cheer for the Cherokee eleven.

$5,000 Premiums For Beef Show

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, October 12—(C. N. P. A. Service)—Baby beef, lambs and hogs, representing the aristocracy of the prominent breeds of livestock will reign supreme at the Junior Livestock and Baby Beef Show, which opens November 2 at the Union Stockyards, South San Francisco, for three days of livestock educational activity.

Future Farmers of America and 4-H Boys and Girls, two hundred fifty strong from all parts of Utah, Nevada and California, will vie with one another for $5000 in cash premiums and happy will be the girl or boy who carries home the grand championship ribbons.

These young stockmen are putting the finishing touches on their animals, grooming and marcelling them to the highest state of perfection for the final test when these thousand prize winning aristocrats pass before the scrutiny of the judge, with competion of the keenest order prevailing in every division of the show.

The entire meat industry of the Bay District is warming up as show time draws near, when they will purchase the prize winning animals at the auction sale Wednesday, November Fourth. The auction sale ends the year's livestock work of these youthful owners and many a tear will be shed when they part with the animals upon which they have lavished so much care and attention.

The show management is making elaborate preparations for the care, housing and entertainment of the visiting boys and girls and the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce is already working out plans for a big banquet to be given the young stockmen as a grand finale to the livestock show.

Much interest is being shown in all sections of the West in the forthcoming show and a large attendance is expected. No admission will be charger.

Politically Speaking

By MELVIN LORD
(United Pres Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 15 — (UP)—Governor Rolph is finding his special legislative session proposal to be one of the most skittish political nags he has tried to ride this year.

While the whole thing got a bit out of control soon after the suggestion was made for the benefit of the state water plan, it was only a case of "the worst is yet to come." And it's still coming. It seems everyone wants to get on and ride.

As it looks now, such a session might be long enough to have all the earmarks of a regular meeting. A schedule that may include water, unemployment, taxes, a real estate department appropriation, plans for the remodeling of the capitol and several other items seems to be a bit heavy for a contemplated two or three-day session. It's just possible there will be no special session at all.

Only this week Assemblyman Robert L. Patterson, administration floor leader of the lower house, and Assemblyman Roy Bishop of Alameda county, warned the governor against calling any special session for unemployment relief, or anything else for that matter, unless a definite plan has been reached beforehand. And definite plans seem particularly scarce—acceptable ones, that is.

Returning from Washington he conferred with President Hover, federal offocials and national business leaders, State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson believes that Congress will soon take steps looking toward the liberalization of the Volstead act to permit a slightly more potent brew than one-half of one per cent.

He does not believe, however, that light wines will be legalized in the immediate future. In Johnson's opinion this is unfortunate from the standpoint of California where he estimates 117 industries would be aided if wines were brought "within the law."

Fred E. Stewart, Oakland, member of the state board of equalization, is not taking seriously the reports he might run for lieutenant governor as a partner of Frank F. Merriam, Long Beach, when he seeks the governorship.

Unlike a number of potential office seekers, Stewart has a job and can sit back for a while and watch the merry-go-round. This also is what he is doing as far as running for congress from the new district in his territory.

The most excitment seems likely in the 1932 senatorial race. Tallant Tubbs of San Francisco is the most likely out-and-out "wet" to seek a seat in the upper house at Washington. Congressman Phil D. Swing is being promoted as the man upon whom the dry camp should unite. What stand Senator Samuel Shortridge is to take is yet to be seen.

Incidently, Governor Rolph has completed plans the execution of which will permit him to realize an ambition born when he was inaugurated. By October 17 he will have concluded visits to the county seats of six far-north counties. Thus since he became governor, he will have appeared in every community in California boasting a court house. There are 58 counties in the state.

Communication

Editor, Redwood City Standard:

Articles have appeared in several newspapers published in the county relative to the law library trustees' taking under advisement the appointment of myself as librarian, on account of what they state to be the attitude of Judge Buck. I desire to assure Judge Buck, members of the Bar and the public generally that I had nothing whatsoever to do with any of these articles either directly or remotely.

The impression might be gathered from the articles in question that perhaps Judge Buck was influenced to defer his consent to my appointment as librarian by reason of my open letter with reference to the directed verdict in the Flood case. My letter on that subject was not an improper expression of my views on the law involved, and conceded the power of the Court under the law of this state to direct a verdict.

I do not believe personal offense was taken where none was intended.

My professional contacts with Judge Buck through many years have revealed him to me as conscientious, kindly and sincere, yet determined to do the right thing as he views matters, without fear or favor. It is unthinkable that his attitude as to my appointment as librarian reflected any resentments or objections to me personally.

The law library trustees have on hand a balance of $8794.80 for the purchase of law books arising from special fees in connection with documents filed by attorneys and devoted exclusively to law library purposes. The fund has an average monthly income of about $190.00 from the same source, none of which is tax money and which is only for law library purposes.

Yours very truly,
JOHN D. WILLARD,
Redwood City.
